

Biography

Franco Cervi (b. 1968, Milan), formally studied architecture at Politecnico di Milano, graduating in 1994. For over ten years he developed a unique position as a graphic adviser, being one of the first in Milan to adopt 3d computer rendering in a commercial setting which led to longer term collaborations with the design and architecture studios of Sottsass Associati and Matteo Thun & Partners (among others).

In 2006 Cervi founded the independent publishing company 279 Editions, specialising in highly individual publications of a select group of illustrators and artists such as Shout, Gary Baseman, Noma Bar, Yuko Shimizu, before increasing pursuing his own artistic practice.

Cervi's artistic research focuses on the essence of existential thought: man's way of being is formulated in its various aspects through numerical decoding that becomes the genetic mapping of infinity. On a formal level, the work expresses the boundary beyond which no further simplification is possible, the point in which concept and form coincide in a resolving synthesis.

Cervi lives and works in Milan.
